WEBSITE DEVELOPMENT EXPERIENCE

Sustainability Information Lab (<http://sites.davidson.edu/sil/>)

A digital hub of information about research being conducted by Dr. Bullock and his students on the politics, psychology, and performance of different forms of sustainability information.

Responsible Consumers Club (<http://www.responsibleconsumersclub.com/>)

An online social networking and information sharing platform for members of the Responsible Consumers Club, a student organization at Davidson College that is supported by research conducted by the Sustainability Information Lab.

Scales of Green (<http://scalesofgreen.com/>)

An online source of information about different efforts to measure the environmental performance of places, products, companies, sectors, countries, and individuals. It explores the science and politics of these efforts and evaluates their strengths and weaknesses.

Theory to Action (<http://theorytoaction.com/>)

An umbrella site of information about and for courses taught by Dr. Bullock at Davidson College, all of which are focused on using social science theories to help students understand and solve real-world challenges.

Environmental Politics (<http://environmentalpolitics.theorytoaction.com/>)

A website that shares insights about environmental issues from students in environmental politics courses at Davidson College. Student posts include policy memos and short essays about environmental films, cases, and current events.

Leaders vs. Entrepreneurs (<http://leadersvsentrepreneurs.theorytoaction.com/>)

A site that provides links to websites designed by students in Dr. Bullock's Leaders vs. Entrepreneurs seminar. Building on theories discussed in the course, students designed their websites to demonstrate the meaning of entrepreneurship and leadership in their own lives.

Politics of Information (<http://politicsofinformation.theorytoaction.com/>)

A website that provides links to websites designed by students in Dr. Bullock's Politics of Information course. Incorporating concepts discussed in the course, these websites present ratings of the social and environmental performance of different subsets of companies.

Environmental Social Sciences (<http://environmentalsocialsciences.theorytoaction.com/>)

A site that publishes posts and presentations by students in ENV 202, Environmental Social Sciences, that apply concepts from psychology, economics, political science and other social sciences to key environmental challenges facing society.

Tasty Easy Healthy Green – co-designed with Sally Bullock (<http://tastyeasyhealthygreen.com/>)

A food blog that presents a wide range of recipes and evaluates their flavor, ease-of-preparation, healthiness, and environmental-friendliness on a five point scale. Each post also includes enticing photos of the dish and an engaging narrative about its preparation.

GrahamBullock.com (<http://grahambullock.com/>)

A clearinghouse of information about Dr. Bullock's research, teaching and service. The site includes posts about Dr. Bullock's recent activities and a news feed of articles related to political science, environmental studies, and sustainability that is curated by Dr. Bullock.

PROFESSIONAL EXPERIENCEGoodGuide.com

Sept. 2007 – Aug. 2008

Co-Founder and Director of Content Development

Directed the development of content for a new social venture, GoodGuide.com; identified, acquired, and analyzed social, environmental and health data for over 65,000 products; used this data to create aggregated ratings of these products for consumers.

Resources for the Future (RFF)

June 2004 – Aug. 2004

Research Intern

Worked with RFF staff on investigating the ecological and philosophical foundations of different approaches to measuring the state of natural ecosystems used by the EPA, Corps of Engineers and Fish and Wildlife Service.

The Nature Conservancy

Jan. 2000 – Dec. 2002

Ecotourism Coordinator, China Program (Yunnan Province)

Coordinated Ecotourism Program activities, including management planning, guide training, community enterprise development, business planning workshops, website development, drafting of codes of conduct, feasibility studies, field surveys, and ecolodge renovations.

Stony Brook-Millstone Watershed Association

June 1999 – Aug. 1999

Watershed Management Program Intern (New Jersey)

Created River Friendly Town Certification Program, researched model environmental ordinances, surveyed streams, trained volunteers in river monitoring protocols, assisted in classes at the Nature Center's Environmental Summer Camp.

World Wildlife Fund (WWF)
